FRIDAY, DECEMBER 30.

The fellows who have for years been fighting the Burley Tobacco Society and doing all they could to hamper the pool, having succeeded are now trying to organize to prevent their friend, the trust, from getting them. These people have been favored with good prices, because of the sacrifices made by their brother farmers. Now that the pool has tumbled and the prices with it they are very penitent. "When the devil was sick, the devil a Monk would be. When the devil is well, devil of a Monk is he."

The Republican has heretofore had something to say in regard to the tax laws of the State. Almost every occupation and trade is now taxed to support the State Government. We have on the Statute books of Kentucky some of the most drastic laws affecting the business interests of any State in the Union. These matters can be remedied but they will have to be remedied by the people in the selection of their representatives in the Legislature. We should get together and select a man for the position, one who is familiar with the situation and able to make himself felt when he goes to the legislature. Not every good man is properly qualified for the position. A representative to be of service to the people he represents should have a fair knowledge of the laws of the State to begin with; be familiar with the laws now in existence and strive to repeal the ones detrimental to the material welfare of the State and assist in enacting some wholesome ones not to benefit a few individuals, but ones that will be of benefit to a majority of the people. While on this subject we have heard mentioned the name of S. A. Anderson, as a suitable person to represent Ohio County in the next Legislature. Mr. Anderson is a thorough Republican, a man of experience, and a lawyer of several years practice and would make a desirable candidate, and a good representative if he consents to make the race and is elected.

Last week the Democratic State Executive Committee was called to meet in Louisville to determine the manner of nominating the State ticket. The various candidates for the State offices to be voted for at the election Nov. 1911 were also invited to attend and give an expression of their views or choice between a primary election and State Convention. Of the twenty-one candidates present, nineteen favored a Convention and only one expressed himself for a primary. The Committee then voted by a large majority to order a primary ignoring the wishes of the men whose advice it had sought. The machine is in charge of Senator McCreary and Ex-Gov. Beckham, and the primary will be run by the machine from start to finish. Even the modest request of Ollie James, to have the Senatorial race included in the primary, was voted down, and with it went down the much heralded devotion of the Kentucky Democracy to the policy of election of Senators by popular vote. If they cannot even allow their own party members a vote for their choice when would they ever give it to all the people? The slate is McCreary for Governor and Beckham for Senator, nominated by a legislative caucus, with all the appointive offices held out as potent but "silent influences." Thus go glimmering the Senatorial chances of our friend, the only Ollie James; and, coming closer home, we fear also for the chances of our own Gabriel Likens, who seems to have hitched up with the wrong crowd and has been reduced to a mere "innocent bystander." For it is written and it was not written by the friends of Ben Johnson either, that it is to be a primary. The primary will not be run in the interest of its enemies. It will be remembered by the older people that a State primary was held about four years ago. It was run by McCreary and Beckham not as partners but as opposing candidates for the Senatorship. If half the bribery and corruption charged by these candidates and their friends against each other is true, the recent New York and Illinois legislative scandals would look and smell like May day flower parades in comparison. Now the politics of these men are to be settled. One will furnish the oil and the other the vinegar, or other necessities for campaign purposes. Who can stand before them? We predict that before May 17th there will not be more than one candidate for any State office before the primary except for Governor. From such machine methods and machine-made candidates thousands of honest Kentucky Democrats will turn again to the Republican party and vote for O'Rear and the rest of the ticket.

Republican Convention.

At a meeting of the Republican Committee of the Seventh Senatorial District of Kentucky, held in Beaver Dam, on the 17th of Dec., 1910 at 1 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of determining the time, place and manner of nominating a candidate to be voted for the State Senator, for said district at the regular November election, 1911 Mr. B. F. Green was elected Chairman and J. C. Flenner, Secretary.

On motion it was ordered and directed that a delegated convention of the representatives of the Republican party of the Seventh Senatorial district of Kentucky be held in the city of Beaver Dam, Ky., at 1 o'clock p. m. standard time Monday the 30th day of Jan., 1911 for the purpose of nominating a Republican candidate for State Senator for said district to be voted for at the regular November election 1911.

The delegates to said convention shall be selected by county mass conventions to be held at the county seat in each county of said district at 1 o'clock p. m. standard time on Saturday, Jan. 28th, 1911. Each county shall be entitled to one delegate for each one hundred or fraction over fifty votes cast for the nominee for governor in said county at the November election 1907. The form of voting at said county mass convention for delegates shall be by viva voce. The number of delegates under the apportionment allowed to each of the counties is as follows:

Butler 21
Muhlenberg 26
Ohio 30

Number of votes necessary to a choice 40

Song—God Be With You Till We Meet Again.

Delightful music was furnished throughout the program. And at noon a great dinner was served which had been prepared by the patrons of the school in honor of the teacher. The dinner was very nice indeed and all seemed to enjoy it very much. The teacher, Miss Bessie Lea Raley, delivered an interesting and impressive talk which was enjoyed by all. She has by her sweet disposition won for herself a place in our hearts, that will ever be hers.

We, the pupils consider the past term of school the most profitable and pleasant six months of our lives and trust that our dear teacher may ever be as loved and endeared by her pupils and friends at old Fairview.

We desire in her behalf to extend our thanks to the kind ladies who prepared the nice dinner which was indeed a pleasant surprise; to the excellent musicians who were present and contributed to the occasion by their music, and to the pupils who presented their teacher with handsome gifts, and lastly to the people for their presence and for the excellent order which was maintained throughout the day. And when another six months have rolled around may we all be permitted to share our pleasures with each other again, is the wish of the writer.
